DETAILED ACTION

1. Applicant's arguments filed 1/14/2008 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.

Arguments:

2. Applicant's representative states that the claim 1, 24, 34 and 36 require communicating to a sender information identifying a current exchange rate for conversion the sender-selected currency and a sender primary currency and argues that the prior art fails to teach or suggest this limitation. Applicant further argues that claims 13, 31, 35 and 37 require receiving a recipient decision with respect to an acceptance of the payment in the sender-selected currency and also argues that the prior art fails to teach or suggest this limitation.

In response, the Examiner respectfully disagrees with the applicant's assertion. It is noted that Boesch et al are directed to a method and system for "determining approval of a transaction between a merchant and a customer. The transaction includes the merchant providing a product to the customer at a price in a first merchant currency. The price in the first merchant currency is known by the customer. The system comprises a customer device associated with the customer. The customer device has a first set of data including a customer amount in a customer currency. The system also includes a server connected to the customer device having the merchant price in the first merchant currency for receiving the first set of data, and for approving the transaction when the customer amount in the customer currency is within a risk range of the price in the merchant currency in accordance with current exchange rates. determining approval of a transaction between a merchant and a customer. merchant currency is known by the customer. The system comprises a customer device associated with the customer. The customer device has a first set of data including a customer amount in a customer currency. The system also includes a server connected to the customer device having the merchant price in the first merchant currency for receiving the first set of data, and for approving the transaction when the customer amount in the customer currency is within a risk range of the price in the merchant currency in accordance with current exchange rates". See column 3, lines 3-17 of Boesch et al. Boesch et al further teach that a customer may hold a plurality of different accounts in a plurality of different currencies. See column 11, lines 7-23. The customer may convert one of their selected currency to a primary currency and then may send the converted currency to a merchant accepted currency. The applicant is directed to column 11, line 49 to column 12, line 6 of Boesch et al.

3. Thus applicant's arguments are not persuasive.

4. The prior Office action is repeated below.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

Claims 1-37 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Boesch et al. (US Patent No. 5,897,621).

As per claims 1-37, Boesch et al disclose a system and method for processing payment transactions in a multi-currency payment system. The system and method comprise communicating to a sender via a communications network a user interface that facilitates sender input with respect to a desired currency in which a payment is to be made; receiving data identifying a sender-selected currency from the sender via the communications network; communicating to the sender via the communications network information identifying a current exchange rate for conversion between the sender-selected currency and a sender primary currency; and if receiving a confirmation of the payment in the sender-selected currency from the sender, informing a recipient via the communications network about the payment in the sender-selected currency. Boesch et al also disclose teach a sender funds analyzer and a recipient analyzer.

Applicant is directed to column 7, line 7 to column 9, line 25.

Boesch et al further disclose the sender primary currency is a currency used in a majority of transactions involving the sender and wherein the payment is to fund from a balance in the sender-selected currency that is maintained within a sender account. See column 5, lines 44-64 and column 6, lines 20-31 and lines 44-49 of Boesch et al.

Boesch et al also teach determining that the sender does not have a balance in the sender selected currency within the sender account and converting an equivalent value in the sender primary currency into the sender-selected currency to fund the payment. See column 6, lines 20-31, column 4, lines 8-45 and column 10, lines 29-65 of Boesch et al.

Boesch et al also disclose updating the current exchange rate at predefined time intervals and upon determining that a predefined time interval has expired, retrieving current exchange rates from a third party system, applying a set of rules to the retrieved rates to verify that the retrieved rates are correct and replacing existing rates are correct and replacing existing rates stored in a database with the retrieved rates. See column 8, line 49 to column 9, line 3.

Boesch et al also disclose accumulating payment transactions in each of a plurality of currencies used during the predefined time interval; requesting the third party system to trade the accumulated payment transactions and receiving confirmation from the third party system that trades of the accumulated payment transactions have been completed. See column 14, lines 14-40.

Functions of determining that the recipient did not accept the payment in the sender-selected currency and displaying an error message to the sender offering the sender to select a different currency for the payment are to provide an interactive session to the involved parties are inherent features in the system of Boesch et al.

The computerized system stores all transactions involved all clients that are stored for inventory control and dispute resolution purposes. Thus, a history of currency conversion calculations from previous transactions involving the sender is an inherent feature in the system of Boesch et al.

Boesch et al also disclose determining whether a recipient requests a conversion of the payment account into the recipient primary currency, and if not creating a new balance in the sender-selected currency within the recipient account and adding the payment amount to the new balance. See column 4, lines 8-45.

Boesch et al also teach that payments will be block for which the recipient does not have a balance.

5. THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
